STATION 3: READ Two Charges for One Phone · with your group

Words to know

receipt = the paper that shows what you paid bank app = your bank on your phone business days = Monday to Friday, not holidays debit card = a card that takes money from your bank

double charge = you pay two times for one thing

due = you must pay by this day

1 Rafael works at a bakery. He is good at saving money. Every month, he deposits part of his paycheck into his savings account. In November, he finally had enough money for a new phone.

2 On Saturday, he went to CityTech, an electronics store. The phone cost $349.99. He paid with his debit card. “You should keep your receipt,” the cashier said. “If there is a problem, you must have it to return the phone.”

3 On Monday, Rafael checked his bank app. He saw two charges from CityTech: $349.99 and $349.99. “That’s $699.98!” he said. “I only bought one phone.” Now he had only $85 in his account, and his rent was due on Friday.

4 He called his friend Lucía. “Have you ever had a double charge?” he asked. “Yes, once,” she said. “You should call the store first. If they don’t help, you can dispute the charge with your bank.”

5 Rafael went back to CityTech with his receipt. The manager looked at the computer. “You’re right. The machine charged you two times. I’m sorry. We will refund $349.99. It can take 5 to 7 business days.”

6 “Five to seven days? My rent is due on Friday,” Rafael said. The manager gave him a paper with a refund number. “If the money isn’t in your account by next Tuesday, call your bank and give them this number.”

7 While he was there, Rafael looked at his new phone case. It was the wrong size. “Can I exchange this case?” he asked. “Sure,” the manager said. “You can exchange it for 14 days with the receipt.” He got the right case.

8 On Thursday, the $349.99 was back in his account. Rafael paid his rent on time. Now he checks his bank app every week. “If you see a strange charge, don’t wait,” he tells his coworkers. “Call the store or your bank right away.”
